Memory is rebuilt every time you recall it. Testing yourself makes that path stronger. Spacing your study over several days works better than cramming it into one evening. Close the book, write down what you remember, and check what you missed.

Spacing your study over several days works better than cramming it into one evening. Close the book, write down what you remember, and check what you missed. Spacing your study over several days works better than cramming it into one evening. Close the book, write down what you remember, and check what you missed.

Spacing your study over several days works better than cramming it into one evening. Close the book, write down what you remember, and check what you missed. Spacing your study over several days works better than cramming it into one evening. Close the book, write down what you remember, and check what you missed.

Spacing your study over several days works better than cramming it into one evening. Close the book, write down what you remember, and check what you missed. Spacing your study over several days works better than cramming it into one evening. Close the book, write down what you remember, and check what you missed.

Spacing your study over several days works better than cramming it into one evening. Close the book, write down what you remember, and check what you missed. That is the end of this chapter, and this is the last word